Southwest FL Luxury Home Builder Nautilus Homes Celebrates New Headquarters with Ribbon-Cutting

Nautilus Homes president Ryan Perrone cuts the ribbon, joined by vice-president Ricky Perrone, during the celebration ceremony for Nautilus Home's new company offices.

Nautilus Homes president, 32-year-old Ryan Perrone hosted over 75 guests during the Saturday, December 3, ribbon-cutting and celebration event for his company's new headquarters located at 7126 Beneva Road, in Sarasota. The mid-day celebration included celebratory mimosas and al fresco dining on the property's shaded outdoor lounge area, followed by the ribbon-cutting, tours of the Nautilus office space, and a champagne toast.

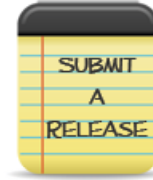

Nautilus Homes purchased the 5,285-square-foot, two-story property on Beneva Road in April and has remodeled 2,115-square-feet of the building's second floor to accommodate day-to-day operations and staff for Nautilus Homes. Known for luxury home-building, Nautilus incorporated a high-fashion, mid-century modern, "Mad Men"-influenced design scheme in its new headquarters. Special design features include Granyte® stone finish on walls, LED lighting throughout, walnut trim moldings and custom cabinetry by Elite Woodwork of Sarasota, and interior design by Space as Art and interior architect Randall Paul Sample. The building has an additional 3,100 square feet of Class B office/medical office space available for lease.

During the celebration, Nautilus Homes also unveiled plans and images for its latest Spice Bay home, on Siesta Key: the 4,827-square-foot Shearwater model, designed by architect Clifford M. Scholz. The project breaks ground in January 2017.
